AGENCY NAME SNOHOMISH COUNTY SHERIFF'S OFFICE	INCIDENT CLASSIFICATION ASSAULT, FOURTH DEGREE	INCIDENT NUMBER SO 08-24992
NAME OF ORIGINAL VICTIM(S) PENNINGTON, GRACE A. (03/03/2003)		REPORT DATE 11/14/08

On 11/14/08 at 1924 hours I was dispatched to make phone contact on a cold assault complaint. When I contacted the complainant, identified as Valerie A. FOX, she told me that her daughter had been assaulted by a known suspect and that she had taken her daughter to the emergency room for examination. FOX identified her daughter as Grace A. PENNINGTON.

FOX said that PENNINGTON had been visiting her father since 10/26/08 and that she had just picked PENNINGTON up that day. FOX stated that PENNINGTON had been staying with her father's girlfriend, identified as Crystal D. HILL. FOX stated that the reason she took PENNINGTON to the emergency room was because she had discovered a bruise and scabbed over scratch on the front of PENNINGTON's right upper arm. FOX said that a CPS report was also being completed by hospital staff.

I told FOX that I would need a written statement from her and that she would need to complete one as soon as possible. I drew a case number and gave the number to FOX along with my name and badge number. FOX told me that she would be in the area the following week and that she would have one completed by then.

After speaking with FOX, I notified Sgt. Ruchty of the complaint. Sgt. Ruchty felt it inappropriate for any of the Deputies assigned to the Gold Bar region to investigate the complaint due to the working relationship between HILL and the Gold Bar Regional Deputies. Sgt. Ruchty asked that I complete the initial report and forward it to him to be sent to the Special Investigations Unit. Sgt. Ruchty also asked that I send a medical waiver form to FOX so that detectives would be able to obtain the information on PENNINGTON's injuries without delay.

I received FOX's statement on 11/20/08. See statement included.

I certify (or declare) under penalty of perjury under the laws of the State of Washington that the foregoing is true and correct.

Detective Follow-up, 03/10/09 (Tuesday):

At 1609 hours, I called the phone number listed on the report for Valerie. She told me that Grace is currently staying with her father, JOHN PENNINGTON, in Duval. She said that she had divorced John and was not Grace's biological mother. Valerie said that Grace had gotten into trouble for some reason but wasn't able to find out what that was. She said that she took several photographs of the injury with her digital camera and offered to send them to me. She told me that she had to use money to keep Grace's attention and then tried to photograph the injury; she said they were blurry. Valerie gave me her email address (valerieafox@yahoo.com).

Valerie recommended that I contact Grace at school. She told me that Grace attended the Duval Christian School, 15510 1st Ave Ne, Duval, Wa. 98019. – (425)788-3636. She told me that John knew about the allegation. She said that he had sent her an email telling her that the incident had already been investigated.

At 1624 hours, I sent Valerie an email, requesting the photographs she had taken.

At 1642 hours, I received an email from Valerie; with 4 attached photographs. Also attached was an email sent to Valerie from John's work email address (john.pennington@co.snohomish.wa.us).

ORIGINAL

On Friday, November 14, 2008, I picked my daughter Grace, up for visitation. When we arrived at home, she began playing outside. She took off her long sleeve shirt and I noticed she had a faded bruise and scabbed over scrape on her upper right arm. When I inquired what happened she stated that Crystal (Hill) had grabbed her arm while they were arguing and fighting over "free-dress day" at school and had tried to put her in the corner. My mother, a Washington State Certified healthcare giver, also looked at the injury. I was concerned that an adult would use so much force that they would dig into my daughter's skin and leave marks.

While my daughter continued to play, I contacted her pediatrician. I was referred to the emergency room and/or outpatient care. I first went to outpatient care and they immediately referred me to the emergency room.

The emergency room doctor interviewed Grace. Grace showed how the injury was caused. She said she and Crystal were fighting/arguing and that Crystal grabbed her arm to put her in the corner, causing the injury. Her arm was still slightly tender when the doctor touched it to examine it. Grace also revealed that it happened at Ms. Hill's home. She was not sure what day it happened.

I was informed that a CPS report was being made and instructed to follow-up with both of my daughter's pediatricians. The staff at the emergency room also suggested a police report for documentation.

I emailed Grace's father about the injury. He emailed me back that he was well aware of the situation and that it had happened on Wednesday morning, while he was working.

Later that evening, my daughter informed me that she had repeatedly asked Ms. Hill to stop and that she would not stop. It upset my daughter that she wouldn't stop hurting her.

Ms. Fox,

In order to assist Snohomish County Sheriff's Office Detectives in investigating this case, I am sending you a medical release form for Grace's visit to the emergency room regarding this case. This form is only to investigate this case, it is not a fact finding mission to investigate Grace's medical history. I have highlighted the areas I need you to complete, including your signature at the bottom. Once you have completed this form, you can remove the pink copy for your records, if you wish to do so. If you could complete this form and send it back to me in the envelope included, I would greatly appreciate it. I will forward it to our Detectives to add to the report once it has been returned. Thank you in advance for your assistance in this matter.

Respectfully,

Valerie,

Grace is to be returned on Sunday at the regular time.

Ms. Hill is a very respected family law paralegal. Her statement regarding last week's exchange with you is already well documented by the Dupont Police Department and has already been considered by the court.

She accidentally scratched Grace's arm on Wednesday morning when getting her to school for me (changing her clothes), while I was working flooding issues. I was immediately made aware of the scratch and it is just that, Valerie, an accidental scratch. Grace took a change of clothes to school in c it was free dress day and all was fine.

As I have done in the past, I will get a copy of any medical reports for unscheduled trips to the emergency room while she visits you. If there are a issues, then I am sure that CPS or anyone else you have continually contacted during each of these visits will contact me or my attorney.

Once again, the exchange is at 4:00 on Sunday, per the parenting plan.

DECLARATION OF ANNE
PENNINGTON

ANNE PENNINGTON declares and states as follows:

I am competent to testify herein and make this declaration from my own personal knowledge.

I. History of domestic violence in my relationship with John E. Pennington, Jr.

John and I met on April 15, 2005, and began dating on April 29, 2005. We started living together at John's condominium in Bothell in June. Grace, John's daughter, began living with us full time in August. In the beginning, John seemed like a caring person who shared my values and interests. Our relationship began as something quite different from what it had become by May 11, 2008, when I moved to my parents' home in Duvall to take refuge from John a little more than a month prior to delivering a baby. When I sought the safety of my parents' home I was attempting to escape a relationship that had become abusive physically, verbally, and emotionally.

John was prone to severe mood swings, yelling, slamming doors, showing aggression on his face and in his body language with me, throwing things, towering over me, and calling me names or swearing at me. This behavior was intimidating and frightening.

After we had moved into our home in Duvall (February, 2006), John was furious with me for something and he crumpled up and broke a pair of reading glasses and then threw them across the room in my direction. They missed my face by about a foot. He was standing to my right in the kitchen and I was sitting on the couch in the den, watching him slam things down on the counter, screaming and swearing at me. Although I wanted to leave, I just sat there, frozen with fear.

John and I have, on occasion, roughhoused at home. But what starts out as play becomes serious when I tell him he is hurting my arms (twisting my wrist, elbow or shoulder) or using a pressure point on my collarbone to lower me to the ground where he then won't let me up. When it makes me angry he laughs and continues. There were times when I had bruises and showed them to John and my family.

From about the third month of my pregnancy until recently, my breasts have been terribly sore, particularly my nipples. It is embarrassing to talk about this. I told John repeatedly about this condition and how it was painful to wear even the softest pajama tops and difficult to wrap a towel around myself. Even though he knew about it, he cornered me at least twice in the kitchen, my back against the sink, him standing up against me while he jabbed at my breasts and tried to twist my nipples. It was excruciating and I was furious but he just laughed and kept trying to do it even though I was pushing his hands away and telling him clearly to 'knock it off!' He did this once while we were lying on the couch watching TV and again in the car. With John, I often found myself saying, "I wouldn't do this to you so why are you doing it to me?" I felt powerless, angry and hurt both physically and emotionally.

During my pregnancy, John would become irrational and overtly controlling, insisting I admit to or apologize for something I didn't do or say. John was unraveling and becoming more unstable as the pregnancy progressed to the point that, on May 11, 2008, I moved to my parents' home in order to avoid him so I would feel safe and supported in the last few weeks before the delivery. Even there, he called incessantly leaving angry messages on my cell phone. I felt that my zone of safety was tenuous.

II. Weapons and threatening behavior

1 Since I have known him, John has kept at least two or three handguns in the 2 top drawer of his bedroom bureau. He has also kept six to eight guns (shotgun,
 3 hunting rifle, a silver long-barreled revolver with a laser scope that looks like
 4 something out of science fiction, a revolver with scope, a musket which he no longer
 5 has, and some other revolvers). We had a terrible argument Wednesday night (May 7,
 6 2008) in our bedroom in which John said "Fuck you!" to me through clenched teeth.

8 John knew that I worked from home on Tuesdays. On Tuesday, May 17, I
 9 went to our home to collect more of my things and took my brother with me to alert
 10 me if John came home while I was in the house. When I went into the master 11 bedroom I saw that John had left a revolver on the chair next to the door with a lot of 12 bullets in a blue nylon backpack. To me, this was a thinly veiled threat. John has a lot 13 of experience with guns and gun safety, he has a five-year-old daughter living in the 14 home with him, and he is aware of the accidental shooting of my colleague's 3-years-
 15 old child by her 10-year old son and the funeral that I attended on April 19, 2008 -
 16 less than a month before. John had told me how a revolver does not require strength
 17 to use because it does not need to be chambered. I read the situation as a clear 18 message from John that he did not want me coming to the house to get my things and 19 that, if I did, I could be mistaken for an intruder.

22 I emailed John that day to tell him I had placed the revolver on the bureau
 23 where Grace would not access it. In response to my confronting him about property

1 damage and the gun, John emailed me to say "let's not do this on email - we should 2 talk on the phone." He did not deny leaving the gun out or throwing away my
 3 personal belongings. In fact, in the response to my petition for protection, John said it
 4 was an "innocent mistake" to leave the gun out. John claimed that he and Grace were 5 away for the weekend and she would not have been able to access the gun but this
 6 too is false. Typically, when we returned home (from exchanges or errands) Grace
 7 would run upstairs to her room, to the bathroom, etc. and if John had simply 8 forgotten that he had left a gun on the chair, then I doubt he would remember that it
 9 was there and go upstairs ahead of Grace to put it away.

11 I have repeatedly expressed my objections to John about having guns in 12 unlocked drawers in the home. I once found a handgun on the floorboard of the 13 passenger seat in his car, unattended with the door unlocked.

14 Early in our relationship, John's niece, Caroline, was dating a young man
 15 named Keith who fathered two children with her. John had Keith and Caroline over 16 to the Bothell condominium to babysit Grace while we were out. Later, we found out
 17 that Keith was convicted of some crimes and jailed in King County - according to 18 John and his family, Keith had threatened to kill his newborn son. Even prior to 19 learning of Keith's troubled youth, I disapproved of having Keith in the home with 20 Grace when we were not present particularly with weapons in the home.

22 In many cases, the only way to end an argument with John was to leave the 23 home. I could not simply ask him for a 'time out' - I had to get out of the home or he

1 would follow me around, yelling at me, calling me names and swearing at me – often
 2 with Grace in the home. Many times I have left the home to find safety or at least to 3 give John time to cool down. Right after we found out I was expecting a baby, we 4 had an explosive argument in the car on the way home from dinner. With Grace in 5 the car, John yelled at me that he would divorce me if I did not do what he said.
 6 Rather than engage him further, when we got home, I went into my closet to get an 7 outfit for work the next day as I planned to spend the night some place where I would 8 be left alone. But John stood in the doorway to the walk-in closet and would not let 9 me leave. He towered over me and insisted on continuing his side of the argument. I
 10 was frightened because I could not leave.
 11

12 We had several arguments like this – I remember another around February, 13 2008, when we argued and I attempted to leave. He towered over me in the closet –
 14 watching me put some things in a bag, he grinned angrily (a kind of menacing 15 sarcasm) and when I told him I didn't want him to watch he said, "Oh, I think I will.
 16 I'll stand right here and watch. I think I'll even help." But when I started to move to 17 get around him to leave the closet, he restrained me by the shoulders or the elbows –
 18 I don't remember. He had his hands out to keep me there. Again, this made me 19 afraid, knowing that no one knew what was going on in the house and I couldn't get 20 out.
 22

23 There was a 20-year family reunion on May 3 that we were going to attend. I
 24 had relatives in town from Australia, Mexico, Ohio, and the rest of my family from Seattle and Duvall would be there – about 12 children and 16 adults in total. John created an argument just before we were supposed to leave for the reunion. I was going to go to the reunion a few hours early but John was upset with me saying “You’re just going to stick me with Grace all day.” He followed me into the master bathroom, he stood over me with an aggressive face saying, “Cry baby! There you go – you cry baby!” I had been sobbing prior to him saying this because I felt it was hopeless trying to argue with him. When he called me a ‘cry baby’ I felt as though I had been verbally kicked in the stomach and I felt the blood drain out of me – my face fell and John saw my reaction and said, “There, I broke you!” He was gritting his teeth in anger and standing very close to me. I began getting my purse together to leave and he started trying to keep me from leaving. The only way to get out of the bedroom was to try pushing him aside. Eventually, he moved to the side.

On May 7, the night we argued prior to my moving to my parents’ home, John said, “Fuck you!” through gritted teeth. He has used foul language as well as names like “Bitch, Fat chick, Dipshit, Dumbshit, Idiot, Asshole, etc.” towards me. In the response to my protection order petition, he did not deny calling me names but said he had called me a “Dip Shit facetiously.” This was on a day when my mother had come over to help us paint the nursery. We both saw John very upset, throwing pieces of an office desk on the ground. Grace heard all of this.

III. Grace as a witness to incidents of domestic violence in our home and their impact on her

In late April – May arguments in which he would range and prevent me from leaving became more frequent – about every few days. Grace would be sent to her bedroom by him when these arguments would occur, but she would come out and sit frozen on the stairway as these incidents would occur. They would occur often out of the blue so that one could sense the tension and unpleasantness in the atmosphere of the home daily, even on days when arguments did not occur.

When I was the target of John’s abuse (physical, verbal and emotional) Grace was often in the home, car, or within earshot. We often caught her sitting on the staircase listening to our arguments even after John had told her to go to her room so that “Mom and I can talk.” Or John would tell Grace to go watch TV or sit in the other room while “Mom and I have a discussion.” Even though John had told Grace to stay in another room, she came in to check on us frequently and was clearly disturbed by what she saw. I recognized severe anxiety in Grace particularly when John was upset, yelling or when he shut her out of our room in order to go after me about something. Grace would hover around me when she sensed tensions between John and me.

At times the anxiety seemed to boil over in Grace. There were times when Grace went into a cleaning frenzy, nervously pushing anything near the edge of the kitchen or bathroom counters back towards the center, organizing and reorganizing her room, the office, the downstairs. It was not just a fun project I had given her like the task of arranging the cans of food in the cabinet – these bouts of cleaning were driven to obsession and were fueled by deep-seated anxiety.

I pointed out to John many times the fact that Grace's hands shook – other people noticed it as well. It seemed to be out of a great desire not to disappoint us – not to spill or drop things which would send John into a tirade.

When John crumpled up his eyeglasses and threw them across the room towards me, I was sitting in the family room and John was in the kitchen. The garage door was halfway between us and I remember sitting on the couch, immobilized with fear, wondering if I could get to the garage and what would happen if I left Grace behind. She was upstairs in her room. But I couldn't take Grace with me – she is his child; not mine.

Grace would cling to me even more than usual after arguments or when she sensed her dad was coming unglued.

Grace talked about recurring nightmares of grey monkeys with grey eyes that stood in her bedroom and stared at her. John asked her just last spring if she knew why she slept with her eyes slightly open (which she does sometimes) and her reply was that she wanted to keep a look out for the monkeys – to make sure they didn't do anything. John always brags about his "grey eyes" – that they are not blue, but grey. I have often wondered if Grace's nightmares stem from life with her domineering father.

1 IV. My desire to protect Grace during incidents of domestic violence and
2 reporting the violence

3 The day that John threw his broken glasses towards me at our home in Duvall
4 (previously described in Section I) I wanted to take Grace out of the home with me
5 but I knew I had no authority to do so. Grace was upstairs and I remember
6 contemplating what would happen if I could get her out with me - the door to the 7 garage was halfway between John and me. I sat on the couch frozen but wanting
8 desperately to go out the door. He left the kitchen and went upstairs - I remember not 9 leaving because I thought it would make him angrier and he would do something
10 worse when I was gone.
11

12 While I wanted to shield Grace from the effects of seeing or hearing any 13 incidents of domestic violence, in hindsight, I was not very successful. John has a 14 powerful voice that carries and I know that Grace often heard him yelling at me - she 15 probably heard the names he called me as well. I advocated for Grace and attempted 16 to short circuit the psychological games John played with her. I thought I could 17 neutralize the impact John's games were having on both her self-esteem and her
18 sense of security.
19

20 He would constantly talk to her as if I were her "mom" even as a 21 manipulative tool against me. There were times when, during an argument with me, 22 John would tell Grace, "Get your shoes on, get a jacket, we're leaving." "Mom doesn't want to be around us." Or, "Mom doesn't love us anymore." I did what I could to comfort her.

As of May, 2008, my legal counsel and the Duvall police advised that I needed to do what I could to stay safe and to ensure the healthy delivery of my baby. John's behavior was destructive and I had to focus on my unborn child. Since the police were aware of the situation, they would drive by John's house as well as mine to keep an eye on things.

V. My concerns regarding the current residential placement of Grace with Mr. Pennington

I cannot comment on the current residential placement of Grace with John for the period of time beginning on May 11, 2008, when John and I separated. However, I can testify regarding his treatment of Grace prior to our separation and, knowing of impending criminal charges against John by the City of Duvall, I believe his downward spiral has continued.

Prior to gaining custody of Grace John 'walked on eggshells' with her for fear that she might favor living with her mother over him or that she would tell her mother something that would jeopardize his attempts to win custody. Once John was awarded full custody of Grace (approximately October, 2007), his interaction with her began to change. John was less guarded about being moody or rough with her. She would indicate she wanted to sit with him on the couch while he was watching TV and he would yell, "Get away! Go sit on the other couch!" She was surprised by

1 his outburst and would back away from him with a hurt expression – he usually then
 2 reversed his demeanor and said, “Oh all right. Come on you can sit with me.” This is
 3 one example of many in which John yelled at Grace or told her one thing and then 4 the opposite, sometimes repeatedly.

5 Since the beginning of my relationship with John I saw him engaging in “a
 6 game” with Grace, telling her, “I love you.” Grace would then tell him she loved
 7 him, too, and he would say with a serious face, “I don’t love you.” He went through 8 round after round of this with her. If I saw them playing this game I voiced my 9 disapproval, believing this fostered emotional detachment in a child. I also told him
 10 that if he truly believed his ex-wife suffered from bipolar disease which could be 11 passed on to Grace, he would stop playing what I called “off –on- off again games”
 12 with her. He did not listen until I told him it might cost him a lot of money for 13 counseling for her when she was older. Then he seemed to move on to other 14 “games.”
 15

16
 17 Sometimes when Grace misbehaved, John would tell her he was going to take 18 her to the orphanage. He described what this place was and I remember her looking 19 confused and worried. If I heard John say this to her I always tried to counteract it by 20 saying her dad was just teasing or I would turn to John and say, “Dad! Stop it!” with 21 a demeanor that would indicate to Grace that John was just playing around and didn’t 22 mean it. John began “playing this game” with Grace when she was two or three years
 23 old.

Over the past year or two, John has repeatedly told Grace we had another daughter, a little girl Grace's age, named "Samantha" who has stayed with us when Grace would go her mother's home to visit. He told Grace, "Samantha played with your things in your room and we did some fun things with her while you were gone. She is better behaved than you and we love her more than you." Again, when I was present to hear this, I would counteract it by telling Grace her dad was just joking and that there was no such child named Samantha. I believe John used this particular game to solidify Grace's desire to be with her him at all times for fear she would miss out on a fun activity or that her father would replace her with another child, even if only an imaginary one.

There were times when these games were too much for Grace to handle. She would get angry, kick the car seat in front of her, or yell at John if it went on for too long, despite my attempts to short circuit the game. I explained in detail my disapproval of this kind of psychological game particularly with a child so little and separated from her mother, shuttled back and forth between parents' homes that appeared to have different rules, etc. I told John Grace had to have stability and consistency with dependable boundaries in order to feel safe and secure in our home and in order to develop into a confident adult. I thought my intervention helped - that I could successfully advocate for a stable environment for Grace with John but from October, 2007, to May, 2008, it became clear to me that my advocacy was perhaps making John play these games more frequently with her and that he did not respect my thoughts on the matter.

I witnessed an act of physical violence between John and Grace. On Friday, November 16, 2007, John, Grace and I drove east of the mountains to a forest service cabin in Teanaway, WA, for a weekend. We took my car and as I drove through the North Bend area, we asked Grace if she needed to use the bathroom. She told us she did not but, as we neared Cle Elum, Grace became frantic with the need to urinate. She complained incessantly from the backseat and made John furious. He started yelling at her. I pulled to the shoulder of I-90 and John threw open the car door to the back. He grabbed Grace by the front of her overalls and yanked her out of the car such that her body looked like a ragdoll. I was stunned and tried to calm him down. He jerked her pants down, yelling at her while she urinated. I looked at her face which revealed sheer terror. There were cars driving past in the rain, it was loud and dark, and her father stood above her yelling at her. He gruffly put her back in her car seat and continued yelling. His aggressive demeanor not only had Grace scared but me as well. I waited several days before addressing his behavior with him whereas, with Grace I talked with her about it as soon as we got to the Safeway in Cle Elum. I comforted her and she clung to my side throughout the store. When John and I talked he seemed to understand how inappropriate his rough handling of Grace had been and he assured me he would not do it again. I did, however, see him yank her towards him a couple of other times when he was angry with her.

I also told John I disapproved of him taking showers with Grace. She was eye level with his genitalia and, while I disapproved, I had no authority to tell John what he could and could not do with his daughter.

Last spring, while John was tucking Grace in bed, I stood outside her bedroom looking through the beads that hang in her doorway. I had not heard any words or rustling coming from her bedroom for awhile so I went down to check in on her. John was bending over her bed and they must have been talking quietly though I couldn't hear them. I was still standing there when John turned around to leave and, upon seeing me, he seemed angry with me. He brushed past me abruptly. I didn't question him though I found it odd that he would act this way. I think he felt I was spying on him or that he was doing something inappropriate and I was trying to catch him...when I was just trying not to interfere and to make it harder for Grace to get to sleep.

I did, however, find it odd that John's relationship with Grace was so intense. He had written in his journal how Grace was an extension of himself. And he once commented to me that he knew it was unhealthy but he could not help drawing Grace really close - perhaps too close - to him when he felt alone. My parents had a few couples over for Thanksgiving dinner in 2005 in addition to John and Grace. Everyone commented to me at a later time how strange they felt when John spent the entire night locked in conversation and interacting exclusively with his two year old daughter, essentially ignoring the adults sitting in the room.

From the beginning I told John he should not yell at Grace. He told me, "its what Fathers are supposed to do - they're supposed to be feared in the household and the Mother is supposed to be the nurturing one." I never gave up trying to convince him otherwise. Grace typically looked embarrassed or humiliated - even afraid -- when her father yelled at her.

John decided to put photos of our family on a MySpace account he created. The MySpace page was public and anyone could access these photos. I insisted that John not put photos of Grace on the site reminding him about the sex predator that had moved to a home a few streets away and explaining that there was enough information about Grace on the site that a stranger or this predator could find out where we lived and establish a sense of security with Grace knowing her nickname and the kinds of activities she liked to do. John had posted photos of Grace sleeping in bed, skateboarding, skiing (with videos), etc. Duvall was listed as our hometown and there were enough identifying features about the photos that it would not be that difficult to find our neighborhood. I remember John telling me, "you have a point" but then not doing anything to make the page private until recently.

I DECLARE UNDER PENALTY OF PERJURY OF THE LAWS OF THE STATE OF WASHINGTON THAT THE FOREGOING IS TRUE AND CORRECT.

Signed at Seattle, Washington this 18th day of August, 2008.

Valerie,

Grace is to be returned on Sunday at the regular time.

Ms. Hill is a very respected family law paralegal. Her statement regarding last week's exchange with you is already well documented by the Dupont Police Department and has already been considered by the court.

She accidentally scratched Grace's arm on Wednesday morning when getting her to school for me (changing her clothes), while I was working flooding issues. I was immediately made aware of the scratch and it is just that, Valerie, an accidental scratch. Grace took a change of clothes to school in case it was free dress day and all was fine.

As I have done in the past, I will get a copy of any medical reports for unscheduled trips to the emergency room while she visits you. If there are any issues, then I am sure that CPS or anyone else you have continually contacted during each of these visits will contact me or my attorney.

Once again, the exchange is at 4:00 on Sunday, per the parenting plan.

JP.

Synopsis / PC for Arrest (Include all elements of the crimes charged)

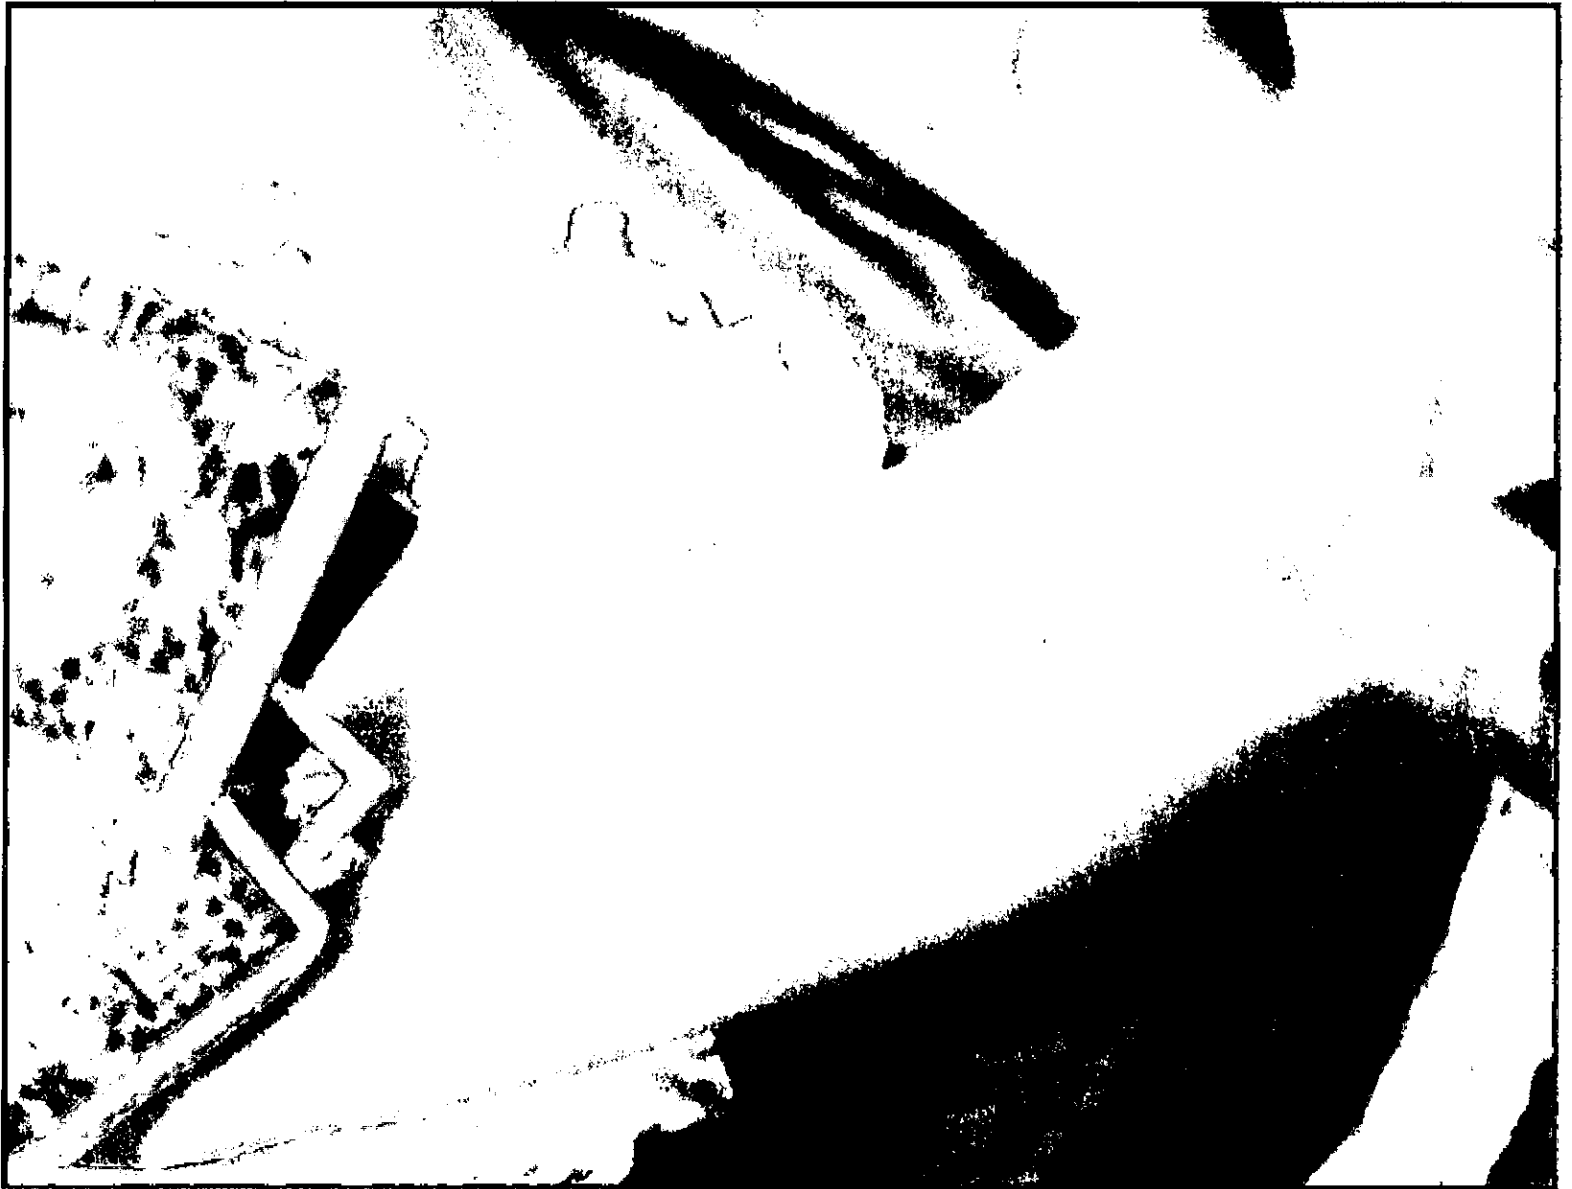

On 11/14/08, the complainant in this case, VALERIE FOX, called 911 to report her ex-husband's girlfriend, CRYSTAL HILL, had assaulted her ex-husband's daughter, GRACE PENNINGTON. Valerie reported that Grace disclosed that Crystal had grabbed her arm and wouldn't let go. Valerie noted a small bruise on Grace's upper arm which had a scab on it. Valerie contacted Grace's father, JOHN PENNINGTON, who was aware of the injury. He told Valerie that Crystal had accidentally scratched Grace's arm while getting Grace dressed. I am forwarding this case to the prosecutor's office as an SRO (Statutory Required Offense) case.

I certify or declare under the penalty of perjury under the laws of the State of Washington that the forgoing statement is true and correct. (RCW 9A.72.085) LS
